TERRIBLE FUSS IN ENGLAND.

The fuss in England is about the London press as being with the horrible questions on this subject. "Vox Populi" and "M. D." are the two papers.

The London press is being over-night because of another "M. D." paper, which is published as a weekly paper in London. And so it is a matter of much importance to the London press.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

An enumeration of the reasons for advertising has recently been given out. There are eight reasons advanced, but there are many others.

Newspaper advertising is the lifeblood of local trade because it touches all economic sources in every community.

Summer's Loveliest Millinery

THE most beautiful of all millinery styles is a soft round crown, wreathed with seeded grasses and small garden roses, that look like the heart of summer. Next a stately hat chooses black and white hair braid for its graceful body and white georgette poppies, with long black ostrich plumes floating out between them, for covering its soft round crown. This is a lovely hat for matrons. Another hat for them appears at the left of the group: it is a small shape of white hair braid with a wreath of garden flowers, berries, foliage and grasses laid about the narrow drooping brim. They are rolled with wide lace which falls in the manner of a veil from the sides and back. The poke shape of pale pink georgette, at the right, is distinctly youthful with a dash of blue velvet ribbon that makes a fine background for poppies, corn flowers, grasses and little blossoms posed against it.

Five of these dreams of summer, expressed in terms of millinery fabrics and trimmings, are shown in the group pictured here. The well-beloved, wide-brimmed, transparent hat at the top is a perennial favorite, one of the good things that every summer brings, developed in accordance with the season's styles. It is shown made of black tulle on a shape that is widened at the sides by pointed curves in the generous brim. The brim is bordered with black piping braid, the crown is a soft puff of malines, and for trimming there is a wide bow posed to the right side and spread across the front. Always there are these picturesque black hats for mid-summer. This year they have rivals in hats of brown malines or lace.

New that rolled here is in vogue. All the important news of the world is contained in the Bonanza. Read it every evening.

IT GETS US ALL.

The farmer who recently explained why he needed to borrow money in spite of the fact that he had just sold his corn may not have used standard English pronunciation in his discourse to the banker, but even the kee er of the strong box had to admit that the message was perfectly clear.

He said it was "de ducks" which ate up the money which the corn should have yielded. This, of course, was unintelligible to the banker, who like the rest of us did not believe that ducks ate money. He didn't even understand how the farmer's ducks could eat the corn which the farmer had really sold and shipped, out of reach of the ducks.

But the explanation left no room for further doubts. On the market
